DAN.

A WAR TIME SKETCH.

BY ROBERT F. BISHOP.

Dan was a colt. A thing of beauty, everybody pronounced him. He was scarcely up to medium height even when full grown. In color a glossy chestnut sorrel, flecked about the head and neck with spots of purest white. There was a look of intelligence in his eye, and ease and grace of movement in his shapely limbs.

"There's going to be speed in that animal," said one of the local judges of horseflesh.

Dan was the property of Harry Slagle, the son of German parents who lived on a small farm in western Maryland. Harry was fourteen years old when Dan came into his possession. The colt was a present from Harry's uncle, or rather, to speak correctly, the uncle discharged an obligation to Harry for a good many little services by giving him the colt in lieu of other compensation. Dan was too young to "break" in the ordinary sense when he came under the control of his new master; but partly out of his affection for the pretty colt which led him to spend a good share of his leisure time with him, and partly out of his belief that early training is best, Harry began at once to give Dan some lessons in behavior.

The Rarey system of horse training was attracting a good deal of attention about that time, and Harry had recently attended a course of lectures on the subject. He saw, to his astonishment, the most vicious horses handled and subdued without any beating, or any of the harsh and cruel methods too frequently employed for that purpose; and, what was of even greater importance, he learned that troublesome and evil habits in horses could be prevented by proper handling from the start. He saw young and raw colts put through a course of discipline which led them in a short time to comprehend and obey the trainer at almost every point. Full of this new idea, Harry went to work upon Dan with great enthusiasm. If his success was not immediately as great as that of the experienced lecturer had been, it was at least sufficiently encouraging to lead him to persevere.

It was a comparatively simple matter to teach Dan how to do all that the ordinary horse is expected to do; such as starting and stopping at the word, pulling a light load in harness, and carrying Harry's little brother, Fred, on his back under the saddle. All this was accomplished by the Rarey method administered with uniform kindness. No whip was used and no harshness of tone or manner was ever manifested, tho it sometimes required all the patience and self-control that Harry could muster to keep the rule laid down for him by his teacher in horsemanship. The coure of discipline was as valuable for the trainer as it was for the colt.

"I know one thing," said Harry, one day after the regular practice was over, "whether this is good for Dan or not, it's a mighty good thing for me."

When Dan was pronounced perfect in the ordinary ways of horses, his education was begun in special tricks and performances of the kind that most horses know nothing about. This was much more difficult, and the progress was slower than in the earlier and simpler stages of the training. But Harry and Dan had come to understand each other so well, and worked together so faithfully, that each served to develop the other in knowledge, tact and skill. After every honest effort on Dan's part to do what was required of him, Harry would throw his arms about his neck, pat him affectionately, and talk to him as if he were a human being, until Dan came to look for these tokens of approval, and seemed to be disappointed when they were not forthcoming.

By the time Dan had been in Harry's possession a year he had become a neighborhood wonder. Grown now to almost his full size, he had developed great speed in running. He would come at Harry's call from the furthest end of the meadow at just the rate of speed indicated by the word of command—now slow and steady as an old stager, now in a rapid walk, a trot, or at his full speed, as Harry gave him the word. No fence in all the community was too high for him to leap. He could stand straight up on his hind feet and balance himself indefinitely, and not merely paw the air with his front feet but imitate almost any gesture that Harry saw fit to make. This latter performance was so grotesque and comical as to prove a neighborhood diversion. Harry's father, however, a severely practical and rather stolid kind of man, had little patience with these performances.

"What for, Hendry, you washte so mootch tdime mit dat coldt?" he asked, one day. "You sphoil him. You make him so he be's no goodt to vwork."

Yet even Mr. Slagle had to admit that Harry neglected no duty. He was a hard worker on the farm, and spent only his own leisure time with Dan. The young horseman, however, had a more serious object in view than either his father or any of his friends suspected. For a couple of years past Harry had begun to desire an education. His advantages were limited to three or four months each winter in the public school. His father could not well afford to spare him from the farm in summer, and the outlook was not very promising, unless Harry could find some way to help himself. After his successes with Dan and other raw colts, and also several vicious horses that had been brought to him, an idea of doing something on his own account began to take on shape and color in his mind.

He was a dear lover of horses, and he had now acquired some degree of confidence in his ability to handle them. Why could he not employ his horse-lore to work his way through school? If he could have Dan with him to exhibit wherever he went, there would be no difficulty in getting business, as his experience in his own neighborhood was now proving. This was the thought that had taken possession of Harry's mind, and gave a new meaning and a character of steady persistence to an undertaking that had been begun, as he expressed it, "for the fun of the thing."

But an event now occurred which threatened to spoil his calculations. The war for the Union was raging, and Maryland had become the theater of great events. Powerful armies and various raiding parties traversed the state from side to side. A detachment of the rebel General Early's troops, commanded by General McCausland, shot like an arrow out of the Shenandoah Valley, crossed the state of Maryland at its narrowest point, and burned the city of Chambersburg in Pennsylvania. Driven by the Union forces under General Averill out of the latter state, they turned westward and followed the national turnpike to the vicinity of Cumberland, Md. General Kelley, commanding the post at Cumberland, marched his force out of town and took a good position about three miles to the eastward. Here he was attacked by McCausland about the middle of the afternoon. The fight lasted until darkness put an end to it. The rebels retreated in the night, and made their escape across the Potomac into Virginia the next morning.

In this retreat they passed over Mr. Slagle's farm, and did not hesitate to help themselves to all the horses that could be found in their route. Mr. Slagle and Harry were compelled to witness the forcible entry of their stable and see all their horses, including Dan, hurriedly led away; but there was no use in attempting to resist several thousand soldiers. Indeed the Slagles and their neighbors, after the excitement was all over, congratulated one another that their losses were no greater, and that no personal harm had been done to any of them.

But it was a bitter grief to Harry to have to give up his colt. He had a good cry over it, and found himself unable to sleep the rest of the night, or take any comfort in any way. He obtained his father's permission to join a party of the neighbors the next morning in following up the route of the retreating army, in the hope that some of the horses might have broken away from their captors in the darkness of the night, and might yet be recovered. The party took the winding, mountain road over which the rebels had gone, and reached the heights above the river in time to witness the crossing of the rear guard. They were disappointed, however, in the object of their search. The Confederates needed horses too badly to keep careless watch over those that had once come into their possession.

After resting awhile the party prepared to retrace their steps. They would scatter through the hills, they said, and keep a lookout in different directions; but they had little hope of recovering any of the horses,

Harry declined to return with the rest. He had an uncle, his mother's brother, living several miles up the South Branch Valley. It was evident that the raiders were retreating in that direction. He would pay his uncle's people a visit, he said, and see what harm the rebels had done them. He tried to persuade some of the party to go with him, but without success.

"I'm as near to the Johnnies now, as I want to be," said one of them, and this remark was echoed by the others.

Harry had little difficulty in crossing the river at the fording place. He took off his shoes and stockings and rolled up his trousers, and thus escaped with only a slight wetting. He pushed on as fast as he could over the road, which had become quite familiar to him in his frequent visits to his Uncle Schneider. People who had been frightened from their homes by the approach of the raiders were now returning. A number of men and boys fell into company with Harry, and presently they caught sight of the column, which had halted. The soldiers were preparing to go into camp. Men who had been either marching or fighting for twenty-four hours continuously were badly jaded and needed rest.

"Halt! You can't go in here," cried a sentinel as Harry, though with a beating heart, attempted to pass the picket post into the camp.

"My uncle's folks live on the next farm above, and I want to see them," said Harry.

"Can't help it," replied the soldier; "you can't see them today; you'd better go back."

Harry's mind was already made up as to what he would do if refused admission to the camp, so he simply turned back a few rods to where a bend in the road concealed him from the guard. Then he struck into a thicket of laurel bushes on the left which terminated in a fringe of woods, and, by stooping and crawling on all fours at times, he found it possible to go around the principal picket post without getting too dangerously near to the next sentinel, who could be seen pacing up and down on the rising ground in the edge of the woods still further to the left of the road.

After passing between the picket-posts in this way, Harry was able, while still keeping in the shadow of the woods, to overlook the greater part of the camp. Many of the thoroughly tired troops were already fast asleep in their tents, while others were cooking a late breakfast before turning in also. Presently Harry's eye fell upon an old colored man who sometimes worked for his uncle. He had evidently been pressed into the rebel service for the present, and was now chopping wood to build fires. Other laborers, both white and black, were engaged in the same service. This gave Harry an idea. Picking up an armful of wood, he emerged from his hiding place in the thicket, and marched across the moderately descending pasture-field to the place where the old colored man was chopping.

"Fo' de Lawd's sake, Marse Harry, how you get ober heah?" was the exclamation of Uncle Mose, as Harry drew near.

"I've come to see about Aunt Jane and the rest of them. Uncle Mose do you know where they are?"

"Bress yo' soul, honey, ye needn't worry 'bout dem; dey's all right. Marse Schneider, he taken de family and all de stock an' make fo' de hills jes' after daylight. I see dem go, an' "—

"Here, you black nigger! bring that wood and build this fire. Hurry up your old bones, or it won't be good for you!"

It was a cavalry officer who spoke, at the same time brandishing his sword in a threatening manner. To divert attention from himself Harry took up the axe and began chopping at the fence-rails, while Uncle Mose, carrying armfuls of wood here and there, as directed, kindled and replenished various fires. Meanwhile the two had a chance for snatches of conversation.

"I mighty sorry, Marse Harry, when I see dat han'som colt o' yourn wif dese people."

"Did you really see him, Uncle Mose?" Where is he?" asked Harry, who, notwithstanding his eagerness, continued his chopping and also in the same low tone of voice.

"Yes, I see him, sure nuff. Dey got him in de pen up dere wif some mo' horses."

Uncle Mose had his arms full of wood, but he pointed with his head over his left shoulder. The lingering hope that had led Harry into his present situation as much as anything else now began to brighten. He cast a few quick glances about him in all directions, and his plan of action began to shape. In a little while Uncle Mose was released from the task of making fires, and, at Harry's request he led the way to that part of the camp where he had seen Dan. Most of the captured horses were distributed about over the camp tied to trees, or hobbled and turned out to graze; but off at one extremity of the encampment was a fenced inclosure adjoining a shed where cattle were kept in winter. Twenty or more of the horses had been turned into this place, and nobody in particular was now paying any attention to them.

Harry's eager eyes quickly lighted upon Dan, who was quietly grazing near the center of the group. From this new and higher situation Harry took another view of the camp and its surroundings. He was now ready for action. Standing just outside of the rail fence, he called to Dan in a low tone:

"Come, Dan—come!"

Dan instantly quit his nibbling at the grass, raised his head and turned in the direction of the sound in a wondering kind of manner.

"Come, Dan—come!" repeated Harry.

Dan saw his master now, and without a moment's hesitation darted away from the other horses, leaped the fence and stood by Harry's side.

"Good-by, Uncle Mose; much obliged to you," said Harry.

"Don't, Marse Harry—don't, fo' de Lawd's sake! dey'll shoot"—

Harry was on Dan's back now, lying almost flat, holding on by the mane, and Dan was at full speed, bounding over whatever obstacles lay in his path in the rough and rocky pasture-field. Harry's intention was to risk a dash between the two picket posts which he had eluded in entering the camp. He might possibly have succeeded in this had it not been for the loud and continuous yelling of Uncle Mose, who still frantically entreated him to stop, even after he had covered half the distance to the woods. But these stentorian cries aroused the camp and drew the attention of the pickets.

"Bang! bang! Halt there—halt!" cried a chorus of voices, after it was seen that the shots fired in his direction had neither frightened the rider nor checked the speed of his horse.

But it was evident to Harry that he must change his plan. There was but one place in the line of obstructions between the two picket posts—thick undergrowth, rocks and partially fallen trees—through which a horse might go. Harry had noted this before he started, and he well knew that everything depended on his reaching this narrow pass before the pickets could stop him. Once entered among the undergrowth in the woods he had no doubt that he could baffle all pursuit. To his dismay, however, he now saw that the pickets of both posts were rushing to intercept him at the pass. They would reach it before he could, and the sharp click of additional guns made it very clear that he could not possibly escape by that route. There was but a single hope remaining. Just above him on the right was a straggling cluster of tall blackberry bushes separated from the main thicket, and between these and the edge of the woods were several young trees with low and plentiful foliage. Instead of halting and submitting to capture as the pickets expected, the fast-fleeing horse and his intrepid young rider suddenly wheeled to the right and put this clump of bushes and trees between them and the soldiers.

Dan's movement in this change of direction was so quick that Harry,

WELCOME, COMRADES.

Next week Chambersburg will have more veterans of the late war within her limits than have been seen here at one time since the war closed.

Chambersburg has always been known for its hospitality to visiting organizations of whatever kind that have come here. None have ever gone away who could truthfully complain of want of kindness or lack of welcome.

But never since the town was organized has a body of men paid it a visit who have received such heartfelt welcome and kindly greeting, as will be extended to the grizzled Boys in Blue who will mingle among us, dip in the dish with us, and in every way enjoy our homes and firesides during the first week in June, 1896.

Chambersburg will be the better for the veterans' visit to our town. Her people, especially the older portion of the population, will be stirred with many emotions as they think of the times when these Boys in Blue or their comrades patroled our streets and did what they could toward guarding homes and other property from the destroying hand of the rebel invader. Not one of the visiting comrades to whom shall be pointed out how much of the town was destroyed in July, 1864, but will wish that he could have been here then to save our pleasant, peaceful and happy homes from the torch of the incendiary.

Yes, comrades, very welcome you are indeed, to meet in our midst in annual encampment, may you enjoy every moment of the time spent here and carry with you to your homes pleasant recollections of Chambersburg and her people. We know that your visit here will be a pleasure to our people and the recollection of it will remain a pleasing memory to them for many years to come.

THREE STATES were swept by cyclones and over a hundred people killed late on Sunday night and Monday. Northern Iowa was devastated just before midnight on Sunday, and Monday morning the storm had reached Illinois, ending up another most destructive cyclone, which killed many people in Michigan towns and wrecked thousands of homes. Over 60 people were killed in Iowa alone and later returns may greatly increase that number. Chicago was the centre of a great wind and rain storm, which amounted to almost a cloudburst, while much damage was done no life was lost in the city. The Michigan cyclone struck Oakland, Lapeer and Macomb counties about 7.30 o'clock Monday night and wrecked a number of towns. Many people were killed, but reports were slow in getting in, owing to the destruction of telegraph wires. What the total number of dead is can only be conjectured at this time, but in almost every town heard from so far there have been some victims of the fearful storm, reaching as high as 16 at Ortonville. Later reports say that forty were killed and that as many more will die. A still greater disaster at St. Louis yesterday is told of elsewhere in today's REVIEW.

CONGRESSMAN MAHON is dissatisfied with the way Speaker Reed has been running legislation to suit himself, especially since he has failed to get recognition to present his border raid claim bill. In a speech on the floor of the house last week, Mr. Mahon declared that there had been a studied and persistent effort on the part of those who control legislation in the house to prevent the payment by the government of its just debts to poor and worthy creditors, referring to the border raid claims. From the beginning of the session until the present time but one hour and a half of honest consideration had been accorded on Fridays to private bills, and such measures had been obliged to seek unanimous consent before they were permitted consideration. He denounced this action as unworthy of a great government, as dishonest in its tendency, and asserted that he would himself see to it during the next session that unanimous consent should not be obtained for any measures.

PRESIDENT ELIOT of Harvard University, who in a recent speech severely criticised the Grand Army of the Republic is likely to hear from many of their organizations. At a gathering of Wisconsin veterans just held at Racine the following resolutions were unanimously passed:

"WHEREAS, It has pleased President Eliot of Harvard University to indulge in a cruel, wicked, baseless assault upon the Grand Army of the Republic, stating among other falsehoods that the chief purpose of the order seemed to be to procure all of the money it can from the government; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the Department of Wisconsin, G. A. R., resents with righteous indignation the outrageous, false, unpatriotic, utterly un-American statements of President Eliot."

Memorial Day—In Memory of Fallen Comrades.

Their eyes are closed, their work is done,
They neither care for friend or foeman,
Rising moon or setting sun
Nor the hand or smile of woman.
They are lying lying low,
'Neath the flowers that sweetly grow.
What to them that cannot know
Of whispering pines so soft and low.

As men may, they fought their fight,
Proved truthful by their endeavor;
Now let them sleep in silent night
In peace forever and forever.
They are lying, lying low,
'Neath the flowers that sweetly grow.
What to them that cannot know
Of whispering pines so soft and low.

Enfold them with the stripes and stars,
Let them rest 'neath pine and holly
Oblivious to the din of wars,
To bugle blast and rattling volley.
They are lying, lying low,
Under flowers that sweetly grow.
What to them that never know,
Of summer winds or drifting snow.

Trust them to the tender care
Of God, whose power alone can save them.
Not one trace of sorrow shall they bear,
No more hostile columns brave them.
Lying low, lying low.
Under flowers that sweetly grow.
What to them that do not know
Who strewed the flowers upon them so.

MEADE AND HANCOCK STATUES.

Governor Hastings and Staff Will Take Part in the Ceremonies at Gettysburg.

The Board of Commissioners for the erection of equestrian statues to Major Gen. George G. Meade and Major Gen. Winfield S. Hancock, on the battlefield of Gettysburg has issued invitations to the unveiling ceremonies, which will take place on Friday, June 5. The commission consists of Gen. J. P. Taylor, president; Col. John P. Nicholson, secretary; Gen. J. P. S. Gobin, Col. R. Bruce Ricketts and Gen. W. R. Hartshorne.

Governor Hastings will take the members of his staff, his cabinet officers and and their ladies and a small party of personal friends to take part in the ceremonies. An order was issued by Adjutant General Stewart directing the staff officers to report for duty in full dress uniform. The party will leave Harrisburg at eight o'clock in the morning in a special train and will return the same evening.

General Gobin of Lebanon, president of the Pennsylvania Gettysburg Battlefield Monument Association, will preside at the ceremonies and formally transfer the statues to the Governor. The exercises at the Meade statue will begin at 10.30 a. m,, with prayer by Rev. J. G. Walker, Philadelphia, Chaplain of Geo. G. Meade Post, No. 1, G. A. R. The statue will be unveiled by Master George Gordon Meade, grandson of General Meade. The dedicatory services by Meade Post will follow, after which the statue will be turned over to the Governor and an oration delivered by General David M. Gregg of Reading, Commander of the Second Cavalry division at Gettysburg.

The ceremonies at the Hancock statue will begin at two o'clock with prayer by Rev. Dr. H. W. McKnight of Gettysburg. After the unveiling, dedicatory services, formal transfer and reception of the statue an oration will be delivered by General Harry H. Bingham of Philadelphia, who served on Hancock's staff at Gettysburg. The ceremonies will be interspersed with music by a band.

It is thought that the greater part of the visitors who will be in Chambersburg at the encampment next week will go to Gettysburg on Friday. A special train will leave here on the Western Maryland Railroad at 6.50 a. m.

Greene Township Veterans Active.

Several months ago a movement was set on foot by the old soldiers residing in the middle election district of Greene township for the purpose of erecting flags over the schoolhouses in their district. Public meetings were held and an organization was effected having the above object in view. Comrade J. A. Howard was chosen president, W. H. Shirley secretary and B. F. Sterner treasurer. About $29 were raised and work was at once begun on erecting a pole at the Scotland schoolhouse. A pole in two sections, eighty-five feet above ground, was erected Saturday morning. The top section is surmounted by a brazen ball 11 inches in diameter.

A number of veterans and about 75 citizens of the place were in attendance at the pole-raising. It is the purpose of this organization to float the flag, which is 8½ by 16 feet, on Memorial day. This occasion which is looked forward to, with pleasure by so many citizens in al sections of our country, promises to be especially interesting at Scotland this year.

Among the speakers expected on the occasion are Hon. T. M. Mahon, C. A. Suesserott, Esq., Rev. J. A. Kleffman and others. Stevens post of Fayetteville, with its band of music, and the S. O. I. school and band will be present.

The pole and flag not only reflect great credit on the veterans who thus desire to honor "old glory" but it will also perpetuate their love for their country's flag by instilling in the minds and hearts of the school children in the district the love and respect due to the flag of so great a nation as ours.

To Comrades Hawk, Daihl and Stambaugh belong the credit of the labor connected with preparing and erecting the large flagpole.

THE GREAT ENCAMPMENT.

The Boys in Blue to be Here Next Week—Preparations for Their Visit—Notes Of the Week.

Before next week's issue of the REVIEW reaches our readers the Encampment of the Department of Pennsylvania G. A. R. will be a thing of the past. All this week our people have been busy preparing for the great event, and now all is ready for the reception of our veteran visitors. The town will be handsomely decorated; our people have evinced a most hospitable spirit and all are determined that the good reputation of Chambersburg for taking care of her guests shall not be sullied.

The first of the visitors to arrive will be the "Lambs" who compose Post No. 51, of Philadelphia. They will leave Philadelphia early Sunday morning and arrive here about four o'clock in a special train over the Reading and Western Maryland roads. They will at once go into camp at "Camp Taylor."

The Department Officers will arrive here at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon and will be quartered at Hotel Montgomery. There over 600 posts in the state. Each post sends a delegate for every fifty members or fraction thereof, and about 1700 delegates will be accredited to the encampment. The officers expect about 1100 to be present at Chambersburg, which will be the largest attendance ever known. Last year at Williamsport there were less than 900. Of course the attendance of the visiting posts and the hundreds of delegates to the meetings of the Women's Relief Corps and Ladies' G. A. R. Circle will greatly swell the throng. The reception committee has provided boarding places for all who have applied. The program of the week has already been given in the REVIEW. The parade will be Wednesday morning at nine o'clock and all of Wednesday and Thursday will be taken up with business sessions.

Abram Levering, Assistant Adjutant General, Department of Pennsylvania, was in town yesterday consulting with the local committees as to the situation. He was well pleased with what has been done and said he was satisfied that the town will entertain the throng nicely. He expects a larger attendance here than at any other encampment.

A detail of men from Co. C., under direction of Captain Gerbig, yesterday began to put up 150 tents 7x9 at "Camp Taylor." The tents were secured from the arsinal at Harrisburg. The camp will lie to the east along the C. V. R. R. and has all the conveniences of water, light, &c. A number of posts have secured quarters there and there will be lively times at "Camp Taylor" during the week. The camp is named after the late Receiver of Taxes of Philadelphia.

There promises to be a lively contest between Judge Alfred Darte, Wilkes Barre and Col. James B. Denworth, Williamsport, for Department Commander. The friends of the rival candidates have sent out circulars broadcast and some ugly feeling has been engendered. It is thought that Judge Darte will be an easy winner.

The present G. A. R. officers in the State are:

Department commander, H. H. Cummings, Tidioute; S. V. department commander, Thomas M. Free, Connellsville; J. V. department commander, Lemon Buch, Reading; assistant adjutant general, J. F. Morrison, Philadelphia; assistant quartermaster general, Abraham Levering, Philadelphia; judge advocate, Thomas A. Morrison, Smethport; medical director, William Stiles, M. D., Philadelphia; department inspector, Charles A. Suydam, Philadelphia; department chaplain, Rev. John W. Sayers, Reading; council of administration, Levi W. Snengle, Philadelphia; A. A. Pancost, Philadelphia; Henry Fulmer, Norristown; W. J. Patterson, Pittsburg; John B. Maxwell, Philadelphia; national council of administration, William McClelland, Pittsburg; A. P. Buickfield.

Among the members of the soldiers' orphans' commission who will attend the department encampment, Governor Daniel H. Hastings will be entertained by Senator W. U. Brewer; General Gobin and Captain G. Harry Davis by Hon. A. N. Pomeroy; Capt. Geo. G. Boyer, General Thomas J. Stewart, Captain George W. Skinner and Col. Ezra H. Ripple have rooms at Hotel Washington and Col. Thomas G. Sample at Hotel Montgomery. Col. Frank S. Magee has several invitations from national guard officers but will likely be found at Hotel Washington.

General O. O. Howard will be the guest of James M. Cree, Philadelphia Avenue.

The line of march for the parade next Wednesday will be:

Form, right resting on King, up King to Second, South on Second to Catherine, West to Main, North to Market, West on Market to Federal, countermarch to headquarters and break ranks.

Right of line—Police, U. S. Flag, Chief Marshall, Capt. J. C. Gerbig; Aids, W. H. H. Mackey, J. S. Mowery, Milton Crawford, George Minnich, J. F. Vanderau, Samuel Monath; Industrial School Band, Industrial School, Commander H. H. Cummings and Staff, Governor Hastings and Staff.

Posts will be formed by seniority commencing 1, 2, 3 and so on to the number of last post, Housum Post 309 in rear. All are expected to be in line Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock. By order of

J. C. GERBIG.
Chief Marshall.

The gentlemen composing the Bureau of Information for the coming G. A. R. convention and encampment, would esteem it a special favor of all parties, who are willing to accommodate boarders or lodgers during next week, will send their names to either of the following named gentlemen or the office of John A. Seiders, Esq. Also indicate whether they wish to accommodate boarders or lodgers, how many and also give the name of the street or number of their houses. This will enable the Bureau to assign those of the visitors for whom accommodations have not yet been secured. The committee is Dr. J. P. Seibert, Geo. W. Atherton, D. M. Eiker, J. L. Dechert, Van T. Haulman, H. S. Gilbert, Wm. G. Reed and B. L. Maurer. The names should be sent in at once to enable the committee to make up their lists.

Run Over and Killed.

Calvin Richards, the fourteen-year-old son of William H. Richards, Frederick, died as the result of an accident, which occurred Wednesday of last week at Utica Mills, where he had gone to visit his brother-in-law, Sanford Taylor. The men were moving a hay press on a wagon, when Richards, who had been riding on top, jumped off while the horses pulled up a hill. He was walking alongside the wagon, when he slipped and fell in front of the front wheel. The heavy load passed over his breast, crushing it in. He lingered until Friday morning, when he died.

TOWN AND TOWNSHIP.

The Events of the County as Chronicled by "Review" Correspondents—Summary of the Week's News.

SYLVAN.

A very impressive marriage ceremony was that which united in bonds of holy wedlock Dr. Bruce E. Nevin, of Grafton, Va., and Miss Margaret Grier the accomplished daughter of J. M. Grier, of Sylvan. The wedding took place Wednesday, May 20, at the home of the bride, the ceremony being performed by Rev. W. M. Deatrich, D. D., of Mercersburg. Many friends of the contracting parties were present to witness the ceremony, among them were: Mr. and Mrs. Stoner, Mr. and Mrs. Spitzer, Mr. and Mrs. Banner Zimmerman and their little daughter, Olive; Mr. and Mrs. Nevin, of Waynesboro and their little son; Mr. and Mrs. McCauley Zimmerman and daughter Mary; Ed. Zimmerman; Helser Cook; Misses Mollie, Anna, Retta, Stella and Nell Cook; Misses Gertrude, Ida and Nell Stoner; Miss Blanche Zimmerman; Mrs. J. W. Zimmerman; the two Misses Mary Phenicie; Mrs. Grant Myers; Miss Blanche Myers; Mrs. Mary Jane Williams; Miss Nettie Thomas, Miss Brantlaver and Mrs. Newcomer.

After the ceremony a splendid dinner was served. The tables were beautifully decorated with flowers. The bride and groom are a very handsome couple and looked well on their wedding day. There were many beautiful and valuable presents which will long remind the happy couple of the occasion which united them for life. Among the presents was a handsome silk quilt from the groom's grandmother. Their many friends wish them a large measure of happiness and that their lives may be prolonged into a green old age. May the roses which strew their pathway at the beginning of life's journey be found on its course through life losing none of their beauty or fragrance.

DOYLESBURG.

Mr. Bierly lost a valuable horse a few days ago. W. S. McVitty also lost a good animal.

A. C. Clugston, the enterprising merchant of this town has been in the eastern cities laying in a stock of summer goods.

A few days since while returning from Doylesburg, the team of William Robertson took fright at another team passing by. In trying to check the runaways one of the lines broke. Mr. Robertson jumped out of the wagon but his coat caught in one of the wheels throwing him to the ground. The wheels passed over him but he received only slight injuries.

The tannery at this place is running on half time this summer.

A certain man in town penned up his hogs, as he thought, and gave them two good feeds, then he discovered that they belonged to his neighbor.

The community was shocked to learn that J. T. Logan, Concord, had attempted to commit suicide on Saturday morning, May 23. The family raised an alarm and Newton Donnelly and Bud Hockenberry cut him down just in time to save his life. Mr. Logan had made a loop out of a rope and fastened it to the rack in the barn. He did not come to his senses until about noon. Mr. Logan has not been well for some time. This is the second attempt he made to take his life, the first being in Orbisonia some years ago.

CONCORD.

Edgar Johns was in Altoona last week.

William Giles, who has been on the sick list for several months is growing weaker.

Hamilton Robertson, Shippensburg, spent Sunday with his mother.

Edith Little and Ella McKim are attending the Juniata district Epworth League convention at Everett.

QUINCY.

The Seven Day Baptists held their annual meeting at the nunnery Saturday last. On account of the rain in the forenoon people were slow in gathering but in the afternoon a fair crowd was present. The services were very interesting and Rev. David Long and John King, Morrison's Cove, were present and assisted in the services.

The German Lutheran congregation at Quincy, Sunday, May 17, elected these officers for three years: Elders, William B. Raby and George G. Knepper; deacons, Dr. H. M. Fritz, D. M. Wertz, J. E. Duey and D. W. Singer.

John D. Ickes and family, Southampton township, visited the former's father-in-law, Rev. John Walk, near Mt. Zion church, and his brother-in-law, Postmaster George C. Walk, Quincy, over Saturday and Sunday.

David Houser, Sr., and Aaron Lesher and family, Grindstone Hill, visited friends at Fox Hill, Sunday.

DRY RUN.

Miss Laura Coons, daughter of the late John Coons of Spring Run, died suddenly of pneumonia on Thursday morning and was buried Saturday at 1 p. m. She was aged 31 years, 10 months and 18 days. Miss Coons was a most estimable and popular young lady and her death was a great shock to the community. She was a consistent member of the United Brethren church of Spring Run and a much respected Sunday school teacher in the same church. Her father died April 1st, last, and her mother last fall. Thus three of the family have fallen within a year. She is survived by one brother and one sister.

X RAYS AGAIN!

The Cathode Rays are not needed to see that by your liberal patronage during our great "Fire Sale," nearly our whole stock was disposed of in an incredibly short time. We are therefore enabled to resume business with almost an entire new stock of Dry Goods, Dress Goods and Notions, within a short time after our sacrifice sale. You helped us by buying our damaged goods quickly, saving us both time and further loss. Now we are going to let you reap the benefit we derived in quickly turning our former stock into ready cash, enabling us to take advantage of a market thatw as over stocked, with more bargains in new and seasonable goods than it has ever been our fortune to strike before. But strike it we did, and at just the right time when ready cash went further than we ever knew it to go. As a result of our good buying last week in the cities our pavement has been filled with box upon box this week of these purchases. To show our appreciation of your kindness to us we are going to mark our goods at lower figures and smaller profits than ever was known. We bought very cheap and lots of goods we bought at prices that we cannot buy at again. Nevertheless we are going to give to the people every bargain we got ourselves. The prices will be such that it will make an impression that will last for years to come. We care not for former criticism when we were blamed for selling damaged goods too low and to prove it we are going right into this sale of cut prices and on brand new goods with the supreme confidence that the people appreciate us. We won't mention prices here save one special lot of goods, wide, all wool serges, in the new colorings for spring, that we intend to sell for 20c. This one line of goods will set you thinking; when you see them they will start you talking. 'Tis but a taste of the good things we have—only one among many. An early visit will pay you. Look through our line. We have never shown such a stock before. New goods, new ideas, new prices, all go to mark a new era in our business. And rest assured we will never be satisfied in this new business until we rise to the very top and our store will be talked of more than all the others in the Cumberland Valley.

A WORD IN PASSING.

Town and County Briefs With a Bit of Comment—Happenings of the Week and a Forecast of Coming Events.

Red, white and blue will predominate in town for a week now.

Chambersburg will see more "blue coats" next week than the town has seen since the war.

Up until yesterday we had just ten cloudy days, with a little rain falling on nearly every day.

It rained on Sunday last. Keep a tab of your calendar to see if we shall have rain for seven Sundays.

R. J. Yocum, Lurgan, has shipped 26,000 dozens eggs since March 1st and a large lot of other produce.

Those who were lately grumbling about the drouth this week started to complain about too much rain.

Dr. John W. Kuhn, Mercersburg, has dissolved partnership with Dr. J. L. Bradley and taken Thomas McAfee as partner.

Ex-Governor Lucius Fairchild, of Wisconsin, died at Madison Saturday. He was once commander in chief of the G. A. R.

The indications are that Memorial day will this year be less given up to sports than formerly, a move in the right direction.

The shoe factory is at last started after being idle for five years. Let us all hope that the Taylor Works will be the next to open up.

For the sake of the good name of the town it is to be hoped that there will be no extortion practiced next week or no raising of rates.

Invitations have been issued for the marriage of Dr. Robley Dunglison Snively, Waynesboro, and Miss Edna Mabelle Kirk, Lancaster, June 4.

If you have more than your share of flowers on Saturday divide them with your less fortunate neighbor so that all may strew the graves of their dead.

The returns of deaths during the past six months now being filed in Clerk Grove's office show that the past winter was unusually hard on the older people.

Manager Jacobs has had a telephone cable placed on the pole at the rear of the court house to run to the exchange. The tube will contain about a hundred wires.

Chambersburg has staked her all upon the ability of the town to entertain the mighty throng next week. Let all work together to make the great gathering a success.

The voters of Hamilton township are a good deal exercised over the proposition to divide the township into two voting districts. Most of the citizens oppose the scheme.

Col. David S. Gordon, formerly of Greencastle, who commanded Fort Myer, near Arlington, was 64 years old Saturday and was retired because of age. Col. Sumner succeeds him.

Our town never looked better than at present and the visitors who will be here next week from all parts of the state will carry home with them good impressions of the Queen of the Valley.

The contract for carrying the mail daily, except Sunday, from Keefers, via Letterkenny and Beautiful to Chambersburg and return has been awarded to H. C. Rice, Carlisle, beginning on June 22d.

Sheriff Mason of Fulton county advertises the sale of the real estate of the Aughwick Valley game and fish club. The property to be sold amounts in all to 3250 acres in Fulton and Franklin counties. The club has been in existence several years and is composed of a number of the most prominent politicians of the state.

Rev. J. A. Crawford, D. D, preached the annual Memorial Day sermon to Housum Post and Co. C in the Central church Sunday evening. The discourse was a brilliant effort based upon the text Ecc. 3: 15. "That which has been is now: and that which is to be hath already been; and God requireth that which is past."

Dr. Z. T. Jones, of Shade Gap, who is a candidate for the legislature is one of the most enterprising farmers of Huntingdon county, and always gives employment to a large number of his neighbors. His position on all questions affecting the farmer is well known and should he be nominated and elected their interests would not suffer.—Orbisonia Dispatch.

Work was begun Monday morning at the Reading iron ore mines east of Boiling Springs. Mr. Thropp, owner of the Everett furnaces, Huntingdon county, is having mined about 1,000 tons of ore, and in case it proves satisfactory, the mines will again be opened and furnish employment for a large number of men. At present there are employed only twelve men.

The annual congress of the Scotch Irish society of America will be held in Harrisburg June 4, 5, and 6. THE OUTLOOK IN KANSAS.

A Franklin County Citizen Writes of the Crop Prospects—Better Stock West.

SCRANTON, KAN., May 20.

EDITOR REVIEW:—For the information of any who may wish to know the condition of the crops through the western states, I write you. This section of the country is certainly having an abundance of rain this spring, not only Kansas but over the entire west. They are in some places having more than is good for the corn as most of the low fields have been flooded and the broken or rolling ground has been badly washed, farmers are unable to work their corn and some of it is getting very grassy. Yesterday several of us started to drive from this place to Baldwin a distance of thirty miles. When about half way we got into one of the worst rain storms I ever have seen. We were fortunate enough to get into a good, small barn. The storm was bad enough to make some hunt the cellar.

When I first entered Kansas I thought the people out here must live on potatoes as from Kansas City to Topeka, a distance of 67 miles, I believe, nine tenths of the land along the Kansas river bottom is planted in potatoes, making thousands of acres. Most of them were in a fine condition. Wheat, oats and grass are in a flourishing condition and the country looks as beautiful as it could. On Monday I was at Lyndon, the county seat of Osage county. Along the road I saw the largest single field I ever saw, it contained 960 acres none of which has ever been broken and it is used as pasture land. There are some herds of beautiful cattle here nearly all Durham. You could travel a long distance here before you would find any scrub hogs such as you can find plenty of in Pennsylvania. The hogs here are all well bred Poland Chinas and all look very pretty. The prospects for fruit are good. Through Kansas they are getting some very fine orchards planted. The famous Wellhouse orchards of Leavenworth and Osage county are said to be the largest in the world as they contain in all over 1,500 acres. In the one in Osage county they are troubled with what is termed the forest tent caterpillar. I noticed as I passed on the train some of the trees were completely stripped of foliage. Next week I expect to leave for the southwest and will enter California at the south end.

D. C. CROFT.

Shippensburg Normal Notes.

Who says old Normal is not full? She is so crowded that many of the students are boarding in town. There are about five hundred students.

The new members of the faculty are Profs. C. E. Barton, James O. Gray and Miss Quigley. The executive department consists of six ladies and nine gentlemen.

The new fountain has arrived and when put up will be nineteen feet in height and very attractive.

We rejoice to know that our latin instructor, Prof. I. C. Beyner, has been elected to the office of superintendent of schools of Cumberland county. The directors could not have made a better choice. Prof. Beyner is a graduate of Ursinus College and is a most excellent instructor. He will be greatly missed by the school and by the faculty of which he has been a member for four years.

The Y. M. C. A. is in a very prosperous condition. New members are being added to the ranks and much interest is manifested. Mr. B. F. Grim has been elected president for the coming year. Messrs. Donnelly and Slagle were at the last convention held in Chambersburg, and speak in the highest terms of the cordial welcome extended them by the Chambersburg boys, and of the kind treatment of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Rearick, whose hospitality they shared.

Fell Into a Well.

Joseph Horst's sixteen year old daughter fell into a well at her father's home, near Cearfoss, Saturday evening. Miss Horst in company with several friends, was standing on the covering of the well, when one of the boards gave way, and she fell to the bottom, a distance of twenty-seven feet. She was not injured except some slight bruises and a cut on the side of her head. She climbed up and out by means of a ladder that had been left in the well when it was dug. She is suffering from the effects of the shock.

A School Boy's Awful Fall.

Charles Reeder, the eleven year old son of Daniel Reeder, East King street, was seriously injured Monday at the King street school building. When school was dismissed at noon young Reeder started to slide down the baluster from the third floor, but missed his hold and fell clear to the lower story, thirty-five feet below, striking on the floor. Strange to say, he was not killed. He was unconscious for a time but soon recovered. His wrist is bruised and his head injured but he is recovering from the shock.

ARGUMENT COURT.

Business Disposed of at the Regular May Term—Several Cases Argued.

Tuesday last was the day for regular argument court. A good many petitions were presented but only a few cases were argued.

On the recommendation of Horace Bender, Esq., master, the court refused a divorce to Benjamin Rodes, from his wife Delia. The master said the husband had deserted the wife, rather than that she had deserted the husband. The costs were put on the applicant.

Chas. W. Cremer was appointed guardian of Mary C. Ely, minor child of D. Wilson Ely, late of Chambersburg, dec'd, with bond in $3500. Charles Miller was appointed guardian of Annie B. Ely, minor child of D. Wilson Ely, dec'd, with bond in the sum of $3500.

Franklin Mehaffey, executor of Mary Felty, Letterkenny township, was granted leave to invest about $8000 of the trust funds in government bonds.

John A. Witherspoon, D. D. Swanger and Joseph Davison were appointed commissioners to make division of Hamilton township into two election districts.

James Shields, a native of Ireland, made application for admission as a citizen of the United States. The applicant was wholly unable to give the name of captain, sergeant or commanders under whom he served during the war and his application was rejected.

The committee on re-indexing the records in the register and recorder's office presented its report which was filed and discussed by the attorneys. It will be open to the inspection of the lawyers for two weeks in the prothonotary's office. It recommends new indexes in the Recorder's office, of the Graves system, and a new general index for the Register's office.

David Kiser was granted a subpœna in divorce from his wife, Martha. The parties are from Montgomery township.

R. C. Hays had a judgment against David S. Hunter which had been entered in April 1886. Hunter sold a lot at the corner of Federal and Loudon streets to Laura V. Miller on October 9, 1886, upon which Hays' judgment was a lien. In July 1891 a scire facias was issued to revive the judgment and the sheriff was directed to summon Laura V. Miller as terre tenant. The writ was served upon Laura V. Miller. Judgment was taken upon said sci. fa. in May 1896. In October 1886 a mortgage in favor of the Franklin Building and Loan association, was executed upon said land by said Laura V. Miller and in January 1893 a judgment was obtained upon the mortgage and the property was sold to W. C. Finney, for the sum of $475. Sheriff Jones paid the proceeds remaining from the sale of the property to the Building and Loan association. The executors of Hays now pray the court for a rule on the sheriff to show why Jones should not pay the money into court they alleging that their judgment was the first lien and that they were entitled to the proceeds. The rule was granted returnable in thirty days.

Wm. Wiley, who was convicted of assault and battery at the last court and went home to Casey's Knob was brought into court on a sheriff's process, was sentenced to pay the costs in the case and of the process.

Awful Disaster Yesterday at St. Louis.

A tornado swept over the cities of St. Louis and East St. Louis at five o'clock yesterday afternoon which destroyed hundreds of houses, sunk steamers in the river, carrying passengers with them, and left ruin and death in its path everywhere. The tornado was followed by a dreadful storm of rain and lightning which set fire to the ruins and there were dozens of fires all over the cities. All wires were down, the electric lights extinguished and the city in darkness.

At a late hour last night it was estimated that at least 1000 people had been killed and $3,000,000 worth of property destroyed. Several towns in Illinois were blown away by the tornado and it is reported that at Drake, Ill., eighty children were killed in one school building.

Railroad Notes.

Eli McClain, section foreman, and Ward Williard, repair hand on the B & C. V. R. R., were seriously injured Sunday morning near Shockey's station. Both live in Edgemont and with the remainder of their crew started to work early in the morning. There was a heavy fog and near Shockey's their hand car ran into a freight train. The men on the car did not see the approaching train until within a few feet of it, and then several of them jumped to escape injury. Eli McClain and Edward Williard both were badly hurt. They did not have time to jump and were hurled from the car when the crash came. McClain was rolled along the bank and had his head cut and one leg injured. It is thought that he is also injured internally. Williard was cut about the head and sustained bruises on the body. The car was knocked off the track and completely wrecked. The engineman was not aware of the approach of the car and could not reverse the locomotive in time to avoid the accident. The pilot of the engine was slightly damaged.

Parties not having lock boxes can get no mail on Sunday.

SENATOR WALLACE DEAD.

The Distinguished Pennsylvanian Passed Away in New York Friday.

William A. Wallace, late United States Senator from Pennsylvania, died at 7.25 Friday morning at 170 West Eighty-eighth street, New York City, after an illness of several months, from the affects of a paralytic stroke received last March.

William A. Wallace was born in Huntingdon county, Pa., November 27, 1827. His parents were very poor and he was the eldest of a large family of children, toward whose support he was early in life compelled to lend his aid. The family moved to Clearfield county about 1836 and in 1847 he was admitted to the bar as a practicing attorney Being possessed of an indomitable will, full of energy and ambition, young Wallace soon forged to the front as a practitioner, having for his opponents in the several courts such men as Curtin, Woodward, Knox, Burnside, Gordon and others, who afterward became prominent as jurists.

During the Know Nothing period he entered politics, and ere long was the recognized Democratic leader in Central Pennsylvania. In 1862 he was elected to the State Senate and re-elected in 1865, 1868, 1871 and 1874. During this time he was chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, and was considered the most efficient leader and organizer ever in control of the party in this state. In 1874 the Democrats elected a majority of the legislature, and during the session of 1874-75 he was chosen United States Senator to succeed the late John Scott. While in the State Senate Wallace was the recognized leader of that body, and his advice was sought by all members on every important question. His ability as a lawyer was recognized and his opinion had great weight in framing all the important legislation necessary to carry out the provisions of the new constitution.

As a counsellor and advocate he had few equals, and his services were always in demand throughout this and neighboring states. After his return from the United States Senate it was his intention to devote his entire time to his large business interests, but a deadlock in his Senatorial district could only be settled by making him the nominee, and he again responded to the call of his people who had so often called him before. Thus, 1882, he was returned to the State Senate and served until 1886.

While in the Senate the last time he interested the Vanderbilts in the bituminous coal fields of Central Pennsylvania, and as a result the Beech Creek road became a competitor with the Pennsylvania for this great tonnage. Senator Wallace was the first president of this road and also of the big coal company of the same name. The advent of this railroad into his home county was of untold benefit to his neighbors, giving them a market for their coal and a way to get other products converted into cash at a profit. He and the people he interested in the matter expended hundreds of thousands of dollars in buying up coal lands, some of which were utterly worthless, in Clearfield county, and the money thus brought into the community enabled many people to better their condition.

Mr. Wallace was a man whose friends were ever staunch and ever true. He never could do too much for them or they for him. Being conservative in nothing and never conceding a position once taken he made many bitter enemies who never became reconciled. In 1890 he was prominently mentioned for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, and could have secured the prise, did he but agree to certain conditions exacted by the friends of President Cleveland, who were then in control of the party machinery in this state, but he refused, as he never made pledges he did not intend to fulfill, and his well known dislike for Cleveland would not allow him to stultify himself by receiving anything at his friends hands that carried obligations with it. Had Wallace but agreed to the terms dictated by the late William L. Scott in Philadelphia, in January, 1890, he would have been elected governor that year and Grover Cleveland would not have been elected President of the United States a second time, for it is well known that the unit rule, so very repugnant to Wallace, in force in the Pennsylvania delegation in 1892, was all that saved him at Chicago.

The past 10 years of Senator Wallace's life have been chiefly spent in New York in the endeavor to get railroad connections built that would develop his property and also caring for his large mining interests located in Colorado and California. Owing to the stringency of the money market and the general feeling of unrest among capitalists he was only partially successful, and this fact had much to do with his illness.

When a young man he was married to Margaret, daughter of the late Judge Shaw of Clearfield, who survives him, together with three sons and three daughters. Mrs. Wallace has been an invalid for many years. The funeral took place at Clearfield, Pa., Monday, and was attended by a great many prominent Pennsylvanians.

THE SOUTH PENN.

A Pennsylvania Railroad Official Says It Will Be Built Beyond a Doubt But Probably Not This Year.

The Philadelphia Record has the following story regarding the South Penn.

"The South Penn road will be built beyond a doubt," said a prominent official of the Pennsylvania Railroad when asked the other day about the future of that famous line; "but it will not be done this year. The re-surveys of the route, now being made by Cumberland Valley engineers, are for the purpose of perfecting our right of way, so that when we decide to go ahead with the road and complete it there will be nothing to delay us. No time has been fixed on for the resumption of work, but I don't suppose that it will be many years before we find that we can make use of another line across the state to great advantage."

As originally projected, the South Penn railroad was to extend from Pittsburg, where it had the backing of Andrew Carnegie and other large manufacturers, to Harrisburg, where it was to connect with the Reading railroad. The financial sponsors for the road were the Vanderbilts, who, in revenge for the support given by the Pennsylvania railroad to the unnecessary paralleling of the New York Central by the West Shore road, carried the war into their rival's territory, by starting the South Penn and Beech Creek roads, both of which were projected into the very heart of the Pennsylvania's territory. A truce was declared after the Vanderbilts and the Pittsburg manufacturers had spent $5,000,000 on the South Penn, but it came too late to prevent the construction of the Beech Creek railroad, which has ever remained as a thorn in the side of the Pennsylvania people, giving the Vanderbilts access to the rich Clearfield coal fields.

"In taking up the work of finishing the South Penn it is understood that the Pennsylvania railroad, which bought the line from the Vanderbilts, intend to complete only a portion of it. This will probably be from Newville, on the Cumberland Valley road, to Mt. Dallas, the northern terminus of the Pennsylvania's Bedford division. By the construction of this new stretch of railroad the Pennsylvania would secure a connection with its Bedford division, which is now isolated from the rest of the system, and would secure for its own lines the entire haul of the West Virginia coal, which now passes from Mt. Dallas to Huntingdon over the tracks of the Huntingdon and Broad Top railroad.

It is doubtful if the South Penn will ever be built beyond Mt. Dallas, at least, not for many years. Most of the expensive tunnel work, on which so much money was spent, is between Newville and Mt. Dallas, and the cost of finishing this portion of the road will not be very heavy.

In connection with the above the following from the Everett Press will be interesting:

"J. Nelson Sipes, Esq., of McConnellsburg, says he is satisfied from information he has obtained from those who know, that the road over the South Penn line from Newville to Mt. Dallas will be built at an early day by the Cumberland Valley railroad; that the company could have no other object in securing the right of way over the route. He also says that his information is that the company has the money available for the work. Mr. Sipes and Major Ives are still at Everett where they have had headquarters for the past two weeks. They expect to finish the work of right of way next week."

Ferdinand Murray, an old veteran who had no home ties, was found dead in the rolling mill of the Altoona iron company at Millville, near Altoona on Tuesday of last week. Mr. Murray lay down to sleep on a board between two heating furnaces and, presumably, expired as he slept. The deceased was a veteran of the late war. He was born in Franklin county November 17, 1833. For many years he worked in the rolling mill at Hollidaysburg. When the war broke out he first enlisted in the three months' service, and later in the eighty-fourth infantry, Pennsylvania volunteers, in which he served until injured in General Bank's retreat from Front Royal. A third time he enlisted in the Thirteenth Pennsylvania cavalry and served until the fall of Richmond. The injuries he received in the war incapacitated him for work, so he was admitted to the soldiers' home at Hampton, Va. In 1894 he went to the soldiers' home at Dayton, Ohio, but left because of alleged ill treatment. He is survived by a stepdaughter, Miss Jennie Miller, and one brother, Matthew Murray, Altoona. His only son, William, was found dead in the rooms of the Amicus club, in Johnstown, about three years ago.

THE METHODIST CONFERENCE.

Election of the Editors of the Church Papers—Installation of the New Bishops—Adjournment Coming Near.

The Methodist Episcopal General Conference on Friday fixed Portland, Ore., as the residence for the bishop in the Northwest.

The committee on episcopacy decided to report the non-effectiveness of Bishop Taylor of Africa, who is seventy-six years old, and recommended that a missionary bishop be elected to take his place.

The election of conference officers was nearly completed. Dr. J. S. Hurlburt was re-elected secretary of the Sunday School and Tract Society; Dr. Charles H. Payne, secretary of the Board of Education; Dr. W. V. Kelly, editor of the Methodist Review; Dr. J. M. Buckley, editor of the Christian Advocate; Dr. D. H. Moore, editor Western Christian Advocate at Cincinnati; Rev. Arthur Edwards, editor Northwestern Advocate at Chicago; Dr. J. B. Young, editor of the Central Advocate at St. Louis; Dr. C. W. Smith, editor of the Pittsburg Advocate; Dr. J. E. C. Sawyer, editor Northern Advocate at Syracuse, N. Y.; Dr. Matthews, editor California Advocate at San Francisco; Dr. A. J. Vast, editor of the Apologist at Cincinnati.

For editor of the Southern Advocate, Dr. E. W. S. Hammond received 184 votes, Q. B. Scott 185, J. M. Shumpert 12 and A. E. Albert 215.

Bishop Warren presided over Saturday's session.

The administration and character of the bishops was approved, and Bishop Thoburn was declared effective, which the committee reported in highly eulogistic terms. The non-effectiveness of Bishop Taylor of Africa, and his retirement was recommended, and the report was concurred in.

At Monday's session the following were approved as trustees of the new American University at Washington: Judge L. E. McComas, Washington, D. C.; Rev. Michael Burnham, D. D., St. Louis; Hon. H. L. Higinbotham, Chicago; Rev. A. J. Palmer, New York; Chaplain W. H. Milburn, Washington, D. C.; Mr. William Cornell, Scranton, Pa.; Hon. John Fritz, Bethlehem, Pa.; John E. H. Heneld, Washington; John G. Holmes, Pittsburg; John R. McLean, Washington, D. C.; John Patton, Curwensville, Pa., and Rev. Thomas Pearnir, D. D., Hillsboro, Ohio.

An attempt was made to prevent the election of a Missionary Bishop to Africa, but it failed. It was ordered that a two-thirds vote be required to elect and a ballot was taken. This resulted: Whole number, 451; necessary to a choice, 301; J. C. Hartzell, 223; M. C. B. Mason (colored), 81; H. A. Munroe (colored), 73; J. W. Hamilton, 15; G. W. Gue, 13; scattering, 46.

There having been no choice, a second ballot was taken, J. C. Hartzell being elected, receiving 335 votes out of 456.

Dr. Hartzell was called to the platform, and Bishop William Taylor, advancing, shook hands with him amid great applause. In response to cries of "Taylor! Taylor!" the aged Bishop came forward and said, "I say, amen." The election of Dr. Hartzell, who has just been re-elected Corresponding Secretary of the Freedmen's Aid Society, is taken as the determination of the church not to allow the work in Africa to perish.

A report of the Epworth League Committee, recommending that the Bishops choose one-one of the Board of Control and the other half be chosen by the delegates to the General Conference, voting by General Conference districts, was considered.

CHURCH AND SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The Lesson For Sunday, May 31.

International Bible lesson for Sunday, May 31, 1896, from Luke 21: 20-36. Title: Destruction of Jerusalem Foretold. Golden text: "Heaven and earth shall pass away; but my words shall not pass away."

When ye see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that her desolation is at hand (v. 20). War means desolation. Preparation for war indicates approaching conflict and strife. Those who know most about war dread it most. Yet war has its place in the plans of God, and the people of God must be ready to meet war, with its consequences when God summons them to this trial. We are not to live always in times and scenes of peace. War comes as a means of desolation to that which must be destroyed, and as the forerunner of a better state of things to come.

These are days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled (v. 22). Dark hours are not without hope. "The darkest hour of the night is just before day." We must have the darkness before the light. If we think only of the gloom, we shall despair. If we think of the coming light, we shall have hope. Tribulations are promised to God's children in this life. When, therefore, tribulations come to us, we are to accept them as in accordance with God's promise of love, and to look forward and upward with hope.

There shall be signs in sun and moon and stars; and upon the earth distress of nations; . . . men fainting for fear (vs. 25, 26). There are trying times promised to God's children before the best things can come to them. Things above us and things about us will tend to dishearten and alarm us. So long as things look bright, we have no reason to hope that the best things are close at hand. Only when everything seems to go wrong is everything sure to be going right. This ought to stay our hearts in hours of darkness and dismay. This puts a bright light on a dark cloud, and makes gloom hopeful.

Then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory (v. 27). If we were watching for the coming of our dearest friend, and knew that he was coming just after the severest storm we had ever known, how glad we should be to have a storm come up, and increase in fury and intensity. The harder the storm, the more its promise. It is to be that way with the coming of our Friend or friends. The storm must come first, and he will follow after. Welcome, then, to the storm, because of what is to follow it.

But when these things begin to come to pass, look up, and lift up your heads; because your redemption draweth nigh (v. 28). "These things." What things? War and vengeance, signs in the heavens, and distress on the earth and on the sea, men fainting for fear, and gloom on every side. When these things begin to come to pass, then take hope. Here's encouragement for us, when encouragement is needed. And that is the way God gives cheer. What a pity that we are not ready to accept his promises just as he gives them!

Heaven and earth shall pass away; but my words shall not pass away (v. 33). The surest thing on earth is the word of God from heaven. God's promise of protection to us shall stand firm though the earth and the heavens give way. No matter if war comes, if men's hearts fail from fear, if darkness hides sun, moon and stars,—we are safe while God is safe. Our life sharing the life of Christ cannot suffer loss. He who speaks peace to us is our peace, when there is no peace apart from him in all the universe.

An inquiry as to the making of dandelion wine has brought from the editor of "Table Talk" the following receipt:

Put four quarts of yellow dandelion petals in a tub, pour over them one gallon of water that has been previously boiled and allowed to cool, cover the tub with a cloth and let it stand for three days, during which time it should be frequently stirred; strain off the liquor and boil it for half an hour, with the addition of three and one-half pounds of loaf sugar, a little ginger, the rind of one orange and a sliced lemon; let the liquor cool, then ferment it with one-quarter of a yeast cake, spread on toast; let it stand for two days and pour it into a cask; let it stand for two months before bottling.

It is not generally known that the Palace, at the Kremlin, Moscow, where the Czar will be crowned, is one of the largest in the world. Nearly all the Grand Dukes, with their suites, will be lodged there during the coronation ceremonies. Twenty-four large houses have been rented for the Princes of the Blood Royal who come to represent their relatives at the ceremonies.

Avoid the scolding tone. A tired mother may find it hard to do this; but it is she who will get most good by observing the rule. The tone of scolding tells upon the throat, just where a woman who is not over strong is apt to feel the ache of extreme fatigue. The children, too, who are great imitators, will be sure to catch the scolding tone, and will talk to their dolls, to one another, and by and by to their own children, very much as their mothers are now talking to them.

Nice handkerchiefs should not be ironed. When rinsed, pass them through a ringer, after they have been folded in a fine towel. Spread on a sheet of glass (a clean marble-topped table answers), and smooth till every wrinkle is out. The linen or muslin will cling to the marble or glass, and dry with that finish that is on the fine unstarched handerchiefs just from the shops.

There are no friends like the old friends
We knew so long ago;
They never fail to tell us all
We do not care to know.

They tell us we are getting bald;
They say, "You're very gray."
Or, "Goodness, but you've changed a lot
Since you were young and gay."
—Chicago Record.

Skirts of wash-gowns are cut with the utmost simplicity; they have a gored front and three wide gores on either side, leaving a sloped seam for the centre back, which is quite short, and of the same length exactly as the front.

He—"I would kiss you if I thought no one would see me." She—"Shall I close my eyes."—Woonsocket Reporter.

Sleeves are slightly less in width, but the full puff drooping over the elbow divides favor with the short high puff which is arranged on the long, close-fitting sleeve, with deep cuffs, finished with falling ruffles.

To mend neatly a very large hole in fine woven underwear, baste a piece of netting over the opening and darn over it. When finished cut close the edges of net uncovered. Thus mended, the garment will be stronger that when new and look far neater than if darned in the ordinary way.

These points on being photographed will be seasonable for the "girl graduates" who wish to have a memento of the graduation day, so dear to their hearts and so eagerly looked forward to:

That, unless there is any urgent reason for it, it is a great mistake to be photographed if you are either out of health, or in low spirits.

That a just-the-mode-of-a-moment style of costume, or coiffure, "date" the photograph, and soon make it look out of fashion.

That it is unwise to wear a new dress. It always falls in awkward folds.

That, whenever possible, it is money well spent to drive to the photographer's.

That a white dress, or one that takes "white," gives a ghastly effect, and one far from becoming, unless the sitter is young and pretty.

That a feather boa or a lace fichu has a wonderfully softening effect on the features.

That, generally speaking, the head and shoulders make a far prettier picture than a full-length potrait.

That a veil imparts a patchy appearance to the face; also, that gloves make the hands appear much larger than they are in reality.

That, above all, if you want your sun-picture to have a natural expression, you must forget where you are.

The one thing which is unforgiveable in hanging pictures is to "string" them along the walls in a line. Next to that crime is the one of arranging exactly symmetrical groups, suggestive of nothing so much as a lesson in geometry. Group pictures, group them gracefully, but don't, when one has succeeded in making a graceful bunch on one side of the fireplace, reproduce it exactly on the other side. Delicately framed water colors are the only proper things for the drawing room, magnificent oils for the library and hall, and etchings and engravings for the dining-room.

Finally, and at last, the sleeve is shrinking into its old proportions, and all the interlinings formerly employed to distend the balloon are left away. It might be supposed from this that the dimensions of the skirt would shrink likewise, but this is not at all certain—in fact, improbable. The flute folds are just as large as ever, in spite of the many endeavors to do away with or modify them, and in order to keep the skirt expanded properly, interlining must still be used.

Among the prettiest and most fashionable of fancy bedspreads are those made of chintz to match the room. They are either simply lined with calico or unlined, and have a frill round. At a recent fancy fair a large number were sold, made in 4-inch wide strips of different colored calico, cleverly mingled, united by lace insertion 2 inches wide and bordered with lace. Large linen quilts, with an outline design worked all over, are also very pretty, but take a great deal of time. Silk is far more fashionable than any of these, and a friend who, during the sales, bought up a large collection of remnants of figured inexpensive silks, and lined them with strong calico, embroidering the pattern here and there where it would have most effect, bordering with deep but not expensive lace, has adapted the colors to each of her rooms, and the result has been a very great success.

Fifty exclusive methods of dressing her hair are the property of Marchioness Li Hung Chang, the richest woman in China. Twice a day this luxurious little lady bathes in oil of orange and acacia blooms, and one thousand attendants are constantly at her service. In her wardrobe are 2000 coats and 1200 "trouserettes," which seems a very ample supply in view of the fact that the Marchioness can walk but a few feet at a time. It is interesting to note that she never fails to keep a detailed account of the vast expenditures of her household.

Her Money in a Fruit Can.

Miss Elizabeth B. Cook, of Bridgeport, a little hamlet of Fayette county, always lived as though she was a pauper. Recently she died without medical attention or friends present and the exact circumstances of her death are not known. She was found lying upon the floor some time after her death. Dr. H. J. English was made administrator and he got a firm of attorneys to look around and see what her few effects amounted to. The inventory of the estate shows that she was the owner of over $22,000 of bank stock. She also had over $28,000 in cash on deposit and was the holder of ten shares of stock in the Pittsburg, Virginia and Charleston Railroad Company. Nearly $2,500 in gold coin and $100 in silver coin and bank notes were found sealed up tight in an old fruit can in her home after her death. The property will go to nephews, nieces and grand-nephews and grandnieces.

Ourselves and Neighbors.

On Monday morning two weeks ago, Etta, the 9-year-old daughter of Mahlon Brown, who lives near the toll gate, was frightfully burned while trying to start a fire with coal oil. The explosion set fire to her clothing and before the flames could be extinguished she was fatally injured, dying several hours after the accident. Her crippled brother Richard, and Wilson Lysinger were badly burned in attempting to put out the fire. This is another sad warning of the danger of starting fires with coal oil.—Bedford Gazette.

The annual love feast at Price's German Baptist Brethren church was held Saturday and Sunday, May 17 and 18 and was largely attended and very interesting throughout. The fine weather brought the people from far and near. It is estimated that there were not short of three thousand people on the grounds Sunday. There were about 400 communicants. Among the ministers from abroad were: Prof. Ellis, of Juniata college, Huntingdon; Elders Stouffer, Beaver Creek; Waybright, Rocky Ridge; Koontz and Baker, Falling Spring.

At the sale of the personal property belonging to Edward Keeler's estate, held in Buckingham, Bucks county, twenty-five bushels of good potatoes were offered for sale. The auctioneer tried to start them at twenty cents per bushel. Finally he got down to one cent per bushel and didn't receive a bid, though there was a large crowd present. "Will anybody take these potatoes if we give them away?" called the auctioneer. There was no response. The potatoes were then put up in bulk, the lot selling for forty-five cents, or less than two cents per bushel.

The Mercersburg Journal says: About 12 o'clock on Saturday night, a large stack of straw on the farm of R. P. McFarland, east of town, was destroyed by fire. The origin of the fire was the work of an incendiary beyond all doubt, as there was no one around the stack at that hour of night who could have caused the fire through accident. We understand that Mr. McFarland had sold the stack to Steiger Bros., butchers, for a fair consideration, and that they had removed a portion of it on Saturday, therefore the loss sustained will be on Steiger Bros.

The county board of Farmers' Institute Managers, will meet at the county commissioners' office on the second Tuesday of June, to arrange for the places where institutes are to be held this season. All of our people who desire institutes, ought to attend this meeting and present their claims. This board is composed of the local member of the state board of agriculture, and one representative from each County Agricultural society, the Pomona Grange and County Alliances. If you find that you cannot attend this meeting, address a letter with your request to Chairman of Board of Institute Managers, care of county commissioners. A suitable hall for the meeting ought to be provided free of charge, by the locality wishing the institute.

At the great national meeting of the members of the Dunkard church at Ottawa, Kansas, last week, preparations were made to entertain and accommodate as high as 25,000 people on the big days. Sleeping accommodations for at least 7000 had been arranged in the park. One enterprising gentleman had contracted for the use of 1,000 beds. The following statistics are interesting: Over 500 tents, 10 by 14, were in place in the park, and lodging-rooms were engaged for several thousand more. To feed this army of guests for a number of days called for careful figuring, as the following list of articles consumed at the last meeting will show: Bread, 5,420 pounds; buns, 23,055; beef, 8,374 pounds; hams, 2,793 pounds; bologna, 715 pounds; lard, 280 pounds; cheese, 403 pounds; prunes, 672 pounds; raisins, 300 pounds; coffee, 450 pounds; sugar, 4,048 pounds; pies, (large) 2,580; ice cream, 235 gallons; milk, 654 gallons. Incidentally it may be mentioned that 32 barrels of lemonade were consumed one day.

Hon. Alexander Port, one of the well-known and honored citizens of Huntingdon, enjoys the unusual distinction of having once arrested a governor of the great state of Pennsylvania. It happened away back in 1842. Mr. Port at that time lived in a hamlet adjacent to Huntingdon, and which is now a part of the town, and had just attained his majority, when elected to the then important office of constable. David R. Porter was serving his second term as Governor when the incident in question was enacted. One Andrew Jonathan Rothrock, long since deceased, claimed to be the Governor's creditor to the extent of $55 for the use of his fields for pasture for the Governor's cows. Rothrock made several unsuccessful attempts to collect the money and finally instituted suit before 'Squire Daniel Africa. The summons was placed in the hands of Constable Port to serve, but no one, not even the dignified 'Squire nor Rothrock, believed he would serve it upon the Governor of the greatest state of the Union. But that's where Port fooled them. As was his frequent custom in the days of no railroads, Governor Porter made his journeys from Harrisburg to his home in Huntingdon on the canal packet boats, and it was on the occasion of one of his periodical visitations that he was arrested by the young constable. One day when the Governor was going to Harrisburg many of his personal friends remained on the boat until Snyder's lock was reached, when all left but Constable Port. Then Port sent word to the Governor, asking him to come on deck. Porter was a little surprised that his friend, the young constable, courted such an interview, and he remarked: "What's wanted, Alex?" Without trembling in the least the constable produced the document commanding Pennsylvania's Governor to appear before 'Squire Africa and show cause why the $55 should not be paid. The Governor "pleaded his privilege," owing to his exalted station, and indorsed the same on the back of the summons and then handed it to Port, who left the boat and walked back to Huntingdon, and showing the indorsement on the summons, proved that he had performed his official duty. 'Squire Africa gave judgment against the Governor. An appeal was taken in behalf of the Governor August 25, 1842, and the matter was entered of court record about that time. It was continued from time to time, until 29 court terms had elapsed, or seven years and three months, after which the record was discontinued, and to this day the judgment remains unsatisfied.

The Shippensburg Manufacturing company has had public sale of the machinery, patterns, castings, etc., which had formerly belonged to the Metcalfe company. The sale was a very satisfactory one and amounted to about $1,400.00. The buyers were Joseph Smith and Mr. Nuttall, of Philadelphia; Mr. Wood, of Chambersburg and Capt. Gilbert, of Gettysburg. Mr. Kuntz chief draughtsman for the American Manufacturing Company, Waynesboro, is now preparing drawings for the new building for the Shippensburg Manufacturing Company, which is to be constructed out of the Metcalfe building, the walls of which are still standing, and work will be begun immediately, as the company hopes to get possession in July. It is proposed to make the building complete in every detail and the finest of the kind in the state. The work rooms will be large and airy, with no crowding, the ventilating arrangements will be perfect, and there will be a large cloak room for the employes. The offices also will be commodious and convenient.

George Holtzinger shot and killed an unknown man at an early hour Friday morning who had broken into his store and postoffice at Holtz, about nine miles from York. Quite a number of robberies have been committed in and about York and county for the past few months and considerable booty carried away, and it is now generally believed that the unfortunate was responsible for the most of it and was a professional burglar. Mr. Holtzinger's store has been robbed three times within the past few months, and so he concluded upon a plan to capture the intruders. He placed a burglar alarm in his store and connected it with his house, about a square away. Last night the alarm went off. Mr. Holtzinger called his two sons and armed with a gun, they went to the store. There they saw the burglar walking about, gathering up parcels. They waited until he came out, when he was called upon to halt. At this the burglar made a leap for life and tried to escape. Mr. Holtzinger fired and the burglar fell dead upon the spot. Coroner Pfaltzgraff of York went to the scene and made an examination. He found upon investigation that the man had in his possession a lot of burglar's tools and money and gave every evidence of being a desperate and successful burglar. The man is an entire stranger in that section and the remains were taken te the county almshouse. Holtzinger is one of the richest and best-known citizens in Windsor township and is a director in the Drovers and Mechanics' Bank of York. The stranger is a man apparently 50 years old, 5 feet 6 inches tall, dark beard and hair and regular features.

The Mercersburg Journal says: The question of watering horses at the town pumps, and more directly at the pump at D. S. Stouffer's, Fayette street, should receive some consideration at the hands of our honorable town council. The amount of water that is taken from this well daily for that purpose is considerable, and again it is quite annoying to go to the pump and find some one there with from one to four head of stock, and be compelled in some cases to wait until they are through watering, as in many instances they hang the bucket on to the pump spout and the horses are allowed to drink from it. Again, it is unpleasant in many other ways, for instance, the slop and filth made by this work upon the pump bed and around it, does to a great extent find its way into the well and water, and it alone is a matter of no small consequence, especially around a well where so large a number of persons are compelled to get the water they use for culinary purposes. Should we be visited again by such a drouth as we were last season, it would be necessary to have all the water postible in the wells, and for this reason if no other this matter should receive just consideration at the hands of the town authorities.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The TIMES is a newspaper for intelligent men and women who want to read all the news of the world every day. The paper has distinguishing merits of its own. It is neither sensational nor dull. It is not sour-tempered. It is not frivolous or visionary. It sees plenty of good in the world and tells about it. It tells of the bad when it must, but not unwholesomely. It prints with fullness the record of human endeavor in many fields outside of business, politics and war—in literature, religion, science, art, sports and household matters. No paper in the country prints so many book reviews and so much book news. No paper has so complete a financial page—a daily manual for investors and officers of financial institutions. Its market reports—wool, cotton, breadstuffs, farm products, &c.—are the best in the country.

The Democracy of THE TIMES is of the old-fashioned sort—as old as Thomas Jefferson; majority rule, no bossism, no machine tyranny, the divorce of politics from private money-making, a sound currency, industrial emancipation, and every-day honesty. To promote the advance of the Democratic party along these lines it labors with heart and conscience and all its might.
